"Ostridges be hanged!" said the successor of Darwin; "ostridges are nothing.. I've shot more ostridges with quail shot than you've got hairs on your head. You don't mean to sit there and say you have't a single azimuth to your back?"
"Don't believe I have," admitted the alligator breeder, mortified, "what are they like?"

"Neither I have, neither I have," replied the wretched promoter of pelicans in a fone of great bitterness. "Spose you just step in, sir, and look round; mebbe there's something else you could say—"
"N-n-o, I guess not," said the tall man. "It would hardly pay me to spend so much valuable scientific time in a fourth class show like this. Not even an azimuth, ch? I should think you'd be afraid of being actually mobbed some time. I'm sorry for you; I've no doubt you mean well; but—not a solitary skamgatibus? Great Scott!"

When Peabody died he left a charity fund of $3,500,000 for the benefit of the de erving poor of London. You may be in erested in knowing that the fund is the been established in England. He first gave £125,000, which he desired the trus ees to use in such a manner that it would be reproductive and should yet benefit the poor. The trustees had a hard time to find out how to fulfill the conditions of the gift. He had said, "I don't want any denomination to have it," therefore none of the institutions under church auspices could be benefited. It would not do to give it in aid of the pauper and public asylums and hospitals, for they were already a charge upon the taxpayers and therefore the taxpayer would be the one chiefly benefited in the lightening of his burdens. Neither would it do to give it to the billnd or the helpless, for then it could never be reproductive. It was very difficult to fulfill the conditions of the Martmain law, and these troubles were aggrabe reproductive and should yet benefit the

I dare say, in the columns of a live newapaper, but there are lots of people who don't know anything about it; and besides, if you would know of the American colony here, you must learn of the existing results of the munificence of its former greatest member. It was at last fixed up, however, and the trustees decided to build tenement houses on the most approved plans, which they would rent at the minimum figure, to the poorer classes of the working people. They did so. It was a great success. The first house accommodated nearly five hundred tenants, and the return for this investment was about 2½ per cent. Then they built more, and now nearly 10,000 people are living in the Peabody houses. They pay for the quarters five shillings and sixpence down to two shillings and ninepence, or $1.32 to 63 cents per week. They have, in the case of the highest price, four rooms, in which are gas, water, range, bath and retiringroom, for none of which they pay anything; and in the lowest price-list two rooms. There are none of them that are not as comfortable as you please. Many of them are better than the middle-class families lives in in America. The architectual aspect of the houses is good, too, and there is an interior court, with playground, fountain, shade and so on, with comforts innumerable. There is no doubt of the fact that the people who live in them are very cosy and comfortable, and it seems to me that similarly disposed charitable men in many cities of America could not do bettar than follow Mr. Peabody's footsteps; and I often wonder why Peabody did not do-it at home. He did considerable for Baltimore; established an institute and library, but unfortunately, ecople cannot take the books out of the library, and the purpose of the donor is not realized. Danvers, the place of Peabody's birth, also received much from his largess.

An Inventor Who says He can Make I Mr. William W. Chipman, of the Grapite Steel and Iron Company of New York

With reference to the process patented by me for making steel direct from ores of iron and from slean Vibratius. n and from slags, I hardly know where direct from ores of iron and from slags, by melting such ores and slags in furnaces or sed of plumbago or some compound The theory of the process is that the nelted oxide of iron comes in contact with melted oxide of iron comes in contact with such lining, which furnishes the carbon re-quired for the reduction of the oxides and nuired for the reduction of the oxides and conversion into steel.

The mechanical mixing of ore and carconaccous materials is not all new; but atcomplete to make steel by such mixtures have failed because of the impossibility of teeping the ore and carbon in contact. A cliable result could never be obtained.
By my method the carbon is fed autonatically in just the required quantity and t just the proper time.

The finest quality of steel has been made by the process at a cost of not more than one cent per pound. Steel, worth from 10 to 15 cents per pound, can be made as cheaply as pig fron. This statement will not seem extravagant when it is seen that the cost is simply the expense of melting the ore plus the value of the graphite con-the ore pins the vame of the graphene consumed, which is inconsiderable.

No flux whatever is used, and the result is always steel—of any required grade; the grade, of course, being regulated by the time of contact with the plumbago lining, a few minutes making the difference between very low and very high steel. Prof. Gtto Wuth, of Pittsburgh, who analyzed a sample of the steel, pronounced it the best ever made in this country.

The most eminent scientists and metal-largists in this country and abroad asserted positively and unequivocally that it was absolutely impossible to make steel direct from ore in an open hearth or reverberatory furnace by the process as claimed by me, though they admitted that I might possibly do it in a cracible. The fact that it has d, which is inconsiderable time shows that science, or rather pro-ors thereof, are not infallible.

The time required for reduction and con-version depends on the weight of charge and size of furnace; in a small reverbera-tory furnace about three hours will suffice. Starting with the raw ore, I once made in forty-five minutes a polished cold chisel of
